

John H. Potts

1892-1949

It is with profound regret that this page which for every issue since the inception of this publication has brought to you the Editor's Report must be devoted this month to chronicling the untimely passing of John H. Potts, co-founder, editor, and publisher of AUDIO ENGINEERING.

John Potts, one of the early pioneers in the development and progress of the electronic arts, devoted his entire life to our industry as editor of some of its leading publications, as author of innumerable articles, and in engineering capacities with the Radio Corporation of America, the General Electric Company, Westinghouse Electric Corporation, and the Sperry Gyroscope Company.

Mr. Potts was president of Radio Magazines, Inc., and editor of CQ and Radio. The latter was succeeded in May, 1947, by this publication, and on December 1, 1948, Mr. Potts became publisher of both CQ and AUDIO ENGINEERING.

John H. Potts, born November 8, 1892, died March 16, 1949.
Author, editor, publisher, engineer. R. I. P.